New Debt Act Forecast For This Province

Alberta and the Supreme Court of Canada, and finally was taken to the supreme authority on such matters in the British Empire, the Privy Council. In this latter appeal, the provinces of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and New Brunswick supported Alberta. These provinces have debt acts of a similar nature.

On effect of this and other debt acts in Alberta has been the refusal of mortgage and loan companies to lend money for home construction which is very much needed in many parts of the province. Alberta is the only province where the provisions of the Dominion government's housing act.

At Saskatoon, Frank Elkan, secretary of the Saskatchewan Federation, United Farmers of Canada, announced that as a result of the council's verdict, a conference of representatives of the three governments would be held to make arrangements to be made.

Representatives of the provinces drafted a farmers' Debt Settlement Act at conferences at Saskatoon and Regina and on Feb. 1, later was presented to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, by John Bracken, former premier of Manitoba.

Interviewed at Regina Attorney General J. W. Eby of Saskatchewan, said the council's decision would have to be studied and it was possible important legislative changes would be submitted to the next session of the Saskatchewan legislature. The legislation is expected to open around mid-February.

Manitoba's attorney general, Hon. James McLaughlin, said he did not say how far the decision affected his province, but it had been the judgment that "within the limits of the Manitoba Debt Settlement Act, the province is in a position to apply the two acts as the same principle."

King Replies to Critics Of Canada's War Effort

In Statement on Forces

Mr. King, C.M.G., leader, expressed regret that he had not been taken to achieve a total war effort, as the National Resources Mobilization Act powers to war industries and war services had not been applied to the mobilization of manpower for military service.

The Prime Minister said that "recent attacks" on Labor Minister Mitchell were the best man in the country, and that he was endorsed by parliament at the last session.

MOORE OFFERED POST

He revealed that he had asked Tom Moore, president of Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, to assume the labor portfolio. Mr. Moore had refused, for health reasons, but had suggested that Mr. Mitchell be the best man in the country.

Mr. King defended the manpower policy of the government. The only limitation on the movement of men was the limitation of the Atlantic was the limitation of shipping space.

He defended the (manpower) achievements for 1942—that for the calendar year—war effort had been increased. Instead of raising nearly 100,000 men, more than 200,000 were mobilized. He said that there were more than 300,000 men in the armed forces.

He said that more than 300,000 men entered war industries, and as regards the armed forces the number was more than 200,000. He said that there had been a 30 per cent increase in the number of men in the armed forces.

He said that the achievement in the mobilization of manpower power greatly exceeded the estimate in 1942.

WARNS ON OPTIMISM

Mr. King warned the house against over-optimism in regard to the length of the war.

He said that he was not a greater mistake than to underestimate the task ahead. He said that the Allied and Axis powers were more powerful than they had been.

Describing the expansion of Canadian military forces, he said that R.C.A.F. squadrons overseas would be increased to 38 in the present year.

The effect of the presence of Canadians in the United Kingdom was to increase the number of men on the mainland operations, who occupied peace numbers, and who would have been available for the Canadian forces.

Mr. King gave the following figures for the growth of Canadian forces:

A year ago the Canadian army comprised more than 25,000 men. At the beginning of the year it was more than 500 ships and personnel had almost doubled with the number exceeding 5,000.

ARMY EXPANSION

At the beginning of 1942 the Active Army included some 20,000 volunteers and an additional 20,000 men called up under the mobilization act. At the beginning of the year the number of volunteers had risen to about 300,000 and the number of men in compulsory service to about 50,000. A considerable proportion of the men had volunteered for general service.

In the air force the number of men had risen to about 100,000. In addition to the armed forces, about 30,000 Canadian merchant seamen were serving on vessels of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. 400 men were serving in Britain with the corps of Canadian civilian firefighters.

The power of Germany and Japan had been increased. He said that the Allies had come to the post-war period. Mr. King said that parties in the house would give too much thought to political matters at this critical stage of the war.

Mr. King began his speech after Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, moved an amendment to the address in reply, saying that the government should make an "adequate" manpower plan.

Mr. King said that the government policy, and that agriculture can make its maximum contribution to the war effort. He said that the government was not to be a part of the national income.

At the close of every day Mr. King said, he and his colleagues have before them communications which are a complete picture as to the state of the country. He said that the government was not to be a part of the national income.

HARDEST PROBLEMS

Mr. King spoke of the manpower situation as "The most difficult problem any country could be faced with at any time." He said that the government was not to be a part of the national income.

Conference Seeks Ease Alberta Farm Labor Problem

Soldiers Correspondence Features Wide Variety Literary, Poetic Styles

Not every man is destined to be a Shakespeare or Longfellow, nor to have the literary style of Robert Burns or other immortalists of prose and poetry. You can take the word of officers commanding various army units in Alberta, however, that some of the boys in the ranks could well be brush up on their style of correspondence.

Commissioned

Private John Doe may be the best soldier in the unit. He may be the best writer, too. He has been writing for his fellow barracks, a good all-round soldier, but when Private Doe takes pen in hand he becomes a competent man.

Recently one officer commanding in Military District No. 13 received a chatty note from one of his men who was on leave.

"Dear Mr. Colonel," it began. "How are you? I'm having a wonderful time. The soldier went on to ask for permission to get married because his lady love 'gets so lonesome' when he is away. 'If you can do this for us we'll be as happy as long Mr. Colonel.'"

CALLS ON PRIEST

A soldier in Alberta camp desiring leave to attend to his family evidently didn't trust his own literary ability and had his parish priest write for the necessary permit. Evidently the private was pretty nervous—even though his mission was the room-for-the letter read as follows:

"I am taking the liberty of asking you if it would be possible to give me a leave for the following reasons:

"(1) There is a marriage in our family.

"(2) The bridegroom is a brother of mine.

"(3) This friend's life is in danger. There will be no company for her as she is leaving for the necessary permit. Evidently the private was pretty nervous—even though his mission was the room-for-the letter read as follows:

Getting Around

Jack DeLong

Perhaps you have been of the opinion that the many newspaper references to Edmonton as Canada's most all-around city were high pressure commercial plugs. Well, you're wrong there, as the new-fangled debunkers say. Edmonton has proof in many forms to back her boast of all-aroundness. And the best of this proof is the list of five McKee trophy winners.

The McKee trophy is emblematic of "the outstanding achievement in Canada aviation in any one year."

The trophy has been competed for since 1927. It was donated by the James D. McKee of Pittsburgh as a memorial to the first transcontinental airplane flight in 1908.

Appeal Made For Several Radios

If you have a spare radio, here's a good use for it.

Sgt. K. Berg of No. 13 District Wing, Prince of Wales Army, is seeking several radios for use of patients in the tuberculosis ward at the General Hospital, some of whom are women and children with no means of obtaining entertainment and relaxation.

A week or two ago Sgt. Berg issued an appeal for six radios and an immediate response was obtained. He said that "there is still insufficient to meet the requirements."

So if you have a radio you can't do without, give him a ring at 2430 and he will arrange to pick it up.

You will derive much satisfaction from helping him.

Old Legend Is Put to the Acid Test

Many Present At Funeral of Mrs. F. Oliver

Even as a young woman when she came to Edmonton as a bride, Mrs. Frank Oliver showed the qualities of courage and the spirit of the true pioneer, the Rev. J. M. Miller, M.A., B.D., said at her funeral service Tuesday afternoon at her residence at 937 103 Street. She was 70 years old.

Pathfinders were members of the Northern Alberta Pioneer and Oldtimers' Association, of which Mrs. Oliver was a life member. They were George H. Ryan, Donald Ross, Angus Macdonnell, John Dimsy, Ralph K. Bellamy, and Alfred Brown.

Presiding the services Mr. Miller represented the church in which Mrs. Oliver had taken so prominent and active a part. From the time that her husband, the late Frank Oliver, founded the first of the Edmonton Bulletin, and minister of the interior in the cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, she had been a property for the First Presbyterian church in Edmonton.

At his text Mr. Miller chose "I go to prepare a place for you" from St. John, 14th chapter, which he believed was a fitting verse to be chosen for Mrs. Oliver, who was so strong a pioneer.

Referring to her fortitude and courage as a pioneer when she came to Edmonton as a bride in a Red River car in 1881, Mr. Miller said that Mrs. Oliver had displayed her sterling qualities of courage and the determination of a pioneer.

"We cannot repay our debt to you, Mrs. Oliver," he said, "but we can do so by the good example of your life and in return do our part to the work and progress of the city."

TOWER OF STRENGTH

Mrs. Oliver, it was a tower of strength with her husband when he occupied the position of leader, she brought the printed page and the newspaper. Secondly she stood by her husband in the most difficult and great position of leadership he had held in Ottawa—the government.

Agicultural Position Is Under Discussion at Largely-Attended Parley

Definite steps to ease the critical labor shortages on Alberta farms were taken Tuesday by the Consultative Committee on Agricultural Services, meeting at the legislative buildings. A. J. Charnick, supervisor of farm labor program, Alberta department of agriculture, gave a nine-point plan of action at the committee meeting.

These plans will implement those made last fall, by the agricultural department, and Employment and National Selective Service representatives, when 16 farm labor supervisors were to be appointed to assist in handling farm labor during harvesting.

Later, the supervisors were to locate men for lumber camps. Only 11 supervisors were appointed. It was stated, but that number was increased to 16, and suitable men can be found. Operation of this scheme was approved by the provincial government.

Upon completion of the harvesting work, the supervisors worked finding men for lumber camps, for the coming spring. Some of these plans are already in operation.

REPORTS PREPARED

Special farm labor reports were prepared, in last pertinent farm data is all to be handled. The reports are to be completed by personal contact with farmers, and results are to be reported to the municipal improvement district or to the provincial government.

These reports will show average of farm and cultivated acreage; months for 1943; average of farm and cultivated acreage; trends in production of various grains and grasses, with projected increase or decrease.

Failed to Pay Alimony: Man Is Imprisoned

Alimony defaulters in Alberta may be in for a rough time if the court action for non-payment of alimony is not paid. George Schram, Edmonton mechanic, is an indication of what action in cases where persons are behind in alimony payments.

Schram was taken into custody by police officers Monday afternoon on a commitment warrant issued by Judge Dabau. The warrant was issued for non-payment of alimony payments on arrears of $1400, being held to be in contempt of court orders issued by Judge Dabau.

1540 ARREARS

Doomed to live with his wife, Alvin Schram, on Nov. 28, 1939, Schram was ordered to pay $5 weekly alimony, and also $5 weekly toward the maintenance of one child of the marriage. Alimony payments were made for some time, but were stopped in November last, ordered that $1400 be paid.

No payment was made under the order, and on Monday, K.C. counsel for Mrs. Schram, made application for the commitment of Schram for contempt of court. The application was made under the provisions of the Alimony Enforcement Act.

Judge Dabau issued the commitment order and fixed the time for imprisonment at one month. If the prisoner pays the amount of the maintenance ordered by Judge Dabau, he will be released. That amount is $97.

The Inquiring Reporter

Should there be new debt legislation as a result of the disallowance of the appeal by the Alberta government, the decision declaring the debt act unconstitutional will have the provincial legislature.

THE ANSWERS

SAM NELSON, clerk: Legislation to protect the debtor, who through no fault of his own, finds himself unable to meet his obligations is a desirable measure. Such legislation is unopposed by creditors can take what a man owes, with little chance of recovery. It would appear that the time is ripe for the Alberta government to introduce a conference of interested parties in an effort to arrive at legislation that would give protection to the well-meaning debtors and creditors.

HARRY SIMMONS, laborer: The United States has a law which is in the spirit of the only provincial legislation on the statute books for the protection of debtors unable to meet obligations. It should be replaced as soon as possible.

SHAWNAN, Sask. Feb. 2. (CP)—Loss in the fire that destroyed the Weaver Lumber Company here Friday was estimated Monday at $2,000. The company will be re-built, officials said.

Arrives Overseas

Debunker "Uncle Sam"

Many articles portray Uncle Sam, the symbol of America, with the wrong shape of nose, according to Doctor Hrdlicka, noted scientist of the Smithsonian Institution, who points out that the typical American nose is not Roman, but is usually either straight or slightly convex. Besides, does not ever see the kind of nose that is usually put on the nose of the statue. Anthropologist Hrdlicka has measured and classified more than a hundred of other living men and women, to know what Uncle Sam's nose should be like.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—Lost Arts of Cooking, Child Care, Are Revived War Makes Us Appreciate More Fully, the Joys of Freedom to Travel, Talk and Read: People Should Do Less Grouching

One of the lessons that war has taught us is to appreciate our blessings and to be grateful for the little things. In the past we have not done so. We have accepted our poverty, our luxuries, our high standards of living as no more than our due and have groused because we didn't get it.

"The only excuse we can offer for our ingratitude is ignorance," we didn't know how well off we were. It had never even to mind as it crossed our minds that we were enjoying pleasure from being free to criticize our rulers and call them names if we wanted to, and to read anything we liked, and to listen to our favorite radio programs. Nor did we think of it as being any privilege to be able to travel whenever we wanted to go, whenever we felt like it.

LUXURIES

As for food clothes and good food, we took them in our stride and only grumbled because our suits and hosiery were not imported, and hosiery were not made up entirely of flax mignon. We didn't even consider ourselves fortunate to have houses and families. We were over taxes, and wives and husbands being hard to get along with, and children trying to do when they are babies and keeping you awake at night wondering what they are doing when they are asleep.

Not only this we have seen the tragic spectacle of millions of people who are afraid even to move in their interest and desert that we have realized that freedom of speech and action is something that is worth fighting for and dying for. It is only since we have begun to see the light of freedom that we are seeing how much of the pleasures of life are dependent upon the things that we call luxuries.

It is both funny and cynical that the offering of gasoline has done more to bring home to us a realization of the big part that small things play in our happiness than all of our philosophizing. For we are already looking back with nostalgia upon the good old days when we could jump in our automobiles and run around the country to the provinces, to go a couple of thousand miles to visit our friends and relatives.

ORACE BEFORE MEALS

And the same thing holds good all along the line. We used to eat a good dinner without really enjoying it. It was just one more meal. But now, with a food shortage that nobody ever expected to see in this country staring us in the face, and with the thought of millions of people in Europe starving to death, we think how lucky we are when we eat down even to a scanty meal. The old-fashioned grace before meals has taken on a real meaning. When we think God "for what we are about to receive" we put our hearts into it.

And certainly people are realizing as never before that the only happiness that stands the wear and tear of life is the domestic brand that is woven on their own hearthstones. The philandering husbands and wives, who go abroad in search of their pleasure, get a few thrills that are followed by headaches and heartaches, but they never know the peace and contentment of the married couple who love each other, and who know that if all the world turned against them there would still be one on whom loyalty and devotion they could depend.

What To Do

Is it polite to take second helpings at dinner?

Answer—At a formal dinner party you are rarely offered a second helping, but should this happen it is polite to refuse. It is a reflection on the progress of the meal.

However, at small, informal, family dinners or luncheons you may be offered "seconds" when they are offered. Of course you would not ask your hostess for a second helping as you may embarrass her, but she will offer "seconds" if she has the food and likes people to enjoy themselves.

At formal dinners a late course does not begin at the first course, but starts with whatever course is on the table when he comes.

Minute Make-Ups

Rushed for time? And want to look your prettiest self—but quick! Spread some light melting cream over throat and face. Dampen a soft, clean face cloth with warm water. Wash your face with quick motions. Now, dash icy cold water over throat and face. A dash of cologne in the water is even more stimulating. Blend on a bit of foundation cream, then powder your glowing skin!

The name corvette is believed to stem from a 15th-century type of Flemish fishing boat known as a corve.

Honor Abe Lincoln In Birthday Dinner

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Abraham Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12, deserves a special celebration dinner. For the main course serve a wainut meat loaf, and for the dessert a special chocolate roll that suggests in shape the logs the great Lincoln used to split in his younger days.

Wainuts are good sources of protein.

Your Baby And Mine

By EDITH THOMAS WALLACE

A grandmother can be a joy and a blessing to any baby who possesses one or she can make herself disliked and shunned by the parent when she deliberately tries to break down the careful training the mother is at such pains to instill in the child.

Any grandmother worth her salt should have sense enough to be considerate of the feelings of a young mother. Perhaps her opinions differ, but she has had no opportunity to put them into practice and her daughter or daughter-in-law has a like privilege. Grandmother has no right, in my estimation, to deliberately flout a parent's wishes and do as she pleases. This is not her baby.

On the other side of the coin, many a young mother is inwardly resentful of a parent-in-law and ready to interfere with her handling of the baby through unbecomingly jealousy. The grandmother is so easy and facile with her grandchild. The grandchild likes her and her expert handling. And young mothers in their resentment pick flaws in the handling—just because in families which want to get along together peacefully, matters never come to such a crisis. Daughters and daughters-in-law are happy to take grandmothers' advice and grandmothers are equally happy to allow them the privilege of working out their ideas without interference.

Any girl old enough to get married and have a family should be old enough—if grandmother has done her own job well—to manage her responsibilities ably.

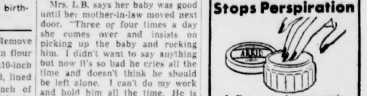

Mrs. J.B. says her baby was good until her mother-in-law moved next door. "Three of four times a week she comes over and insists on picking up the baby and rocking him. I didn't want to say anything but now it's so bad he cries all the time and doesn't think he should be left alone. I can't do my work and hold him all the time. He is not sick, in fact he's very healthy. Should I let him cry it out or rock him every time he cries?" She says I am being mean not to. He is 3-months old.

Babies can stand a lot of holding and cuddling without becoming spoiled. I find it hard to convince myself that if his present feelings were as satisfying as his past feelings, he would be a spoiled child.

Wholesale Prices Rise in Britain

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(CP)—British wholesale prices, stable for many months, rose during January to a wartime high. The increase was 1.2 per cent for the month, compared with a net rise of 1.5 per cent for the last 12 months. The financial Times warned that while the movements were not large "they suffice to act as a warning."

Street Scenes Give Eastern U.S. That Empty Feeling

Trio of topsy-turvy tumblers whirl through the air with greatest of ease, in Hollywood, of course.

Now you see 'em—now you don't. The photos above, showing how OPA's "No pleasure driving" edict acted like a magician's hocus-pocus to make thousands of automobiles "disappear" were taken from the same spot on Philadelphia's ordinary traffic-filled Walnut Street—before and after the Eastern U.S. gas-saving order went into effect. But it's not just the Philadelphia story—the pictures symbolize what went on all over the east. Estimates of reduction in highway traffic in New York area ranged from 50 to 100 per cent.

HOLLYWOOD—Extras in Warners' "Casablanca," if it came to a formal vote, would rate Ingrid Bergman among Hollywood's most considerate stars. She furnished transportation for five women, back and forth between the Burbank studio and their home neighborhood in West Hollywood, ever since the picture started. At the end of the first day's work Miss Bergman overheard several of the women discussing the difficulty of getting home, so she offered them a lift. Then she has gained regular passengers.

Star Schoolgirl

HOLLYWOOD—Joan Leslie has enrolled as an honorary member of the Class of 1943, University High School, Los Angeles, so as not to miss the event she has been looking forward to all her life: receiving her diploma as a member of a large graduating class. A stage child all her life, Joan has attended school between theatre and night club engagements from Georgia to Canada and has had private tutors under the California State Board of Education since she has been in Hollywood. "But I want to be graduated just like other girls," she told friends on the set of "The Hard Way" at Warner Bros. "Being in movies is swell and all that, but I want two things—a big graduation and a big wedding."

REPORT CARD TO THE UNITED NATIONS

EUROPE AND AFRICA
SOVIET RUSSIA

It's report card time, and a checkup reveals Tommy Atkins, Johnny Doughboy and the rest of the United Nations fighting men are doing fine on all but one front. In Africa and Europe, Allied planes are bombing the Axis in Tunisia, Libya, Germany, Italy and occupied areas while our troops make gains on desert fronts. In Russia, Soviet snow soldiers and other Red army troops are pushing the Germans back from Leningrad to the Caucasus. In the South Pacific the Japs are being driven back in New Guinea and the Solomon while bombers blast their bases here and in China and Burma. But in the Atlantic, United Nations ships continue to go down while British, Canadian and American forces seek an answer to the U-boat problem.

F.D.R.'s Son Flying Photog

Lieut.-Col. Elliott Roosevelt of the U.S. Army Air Corps gets his aerial camera ready for a photographic flight somewhere in North Africa. The president's son recently received Distinguished Flying Cross for performing dangerous aerial reconnaissance work.

London School Bombed by Nazis

Rescue workers dig through debris of a London school, smashed by Nazi bombs, where at least 30 children were killed and 12 injured. Twenty-five to 30 German bombers, making the largest daylight raid on the British capital since the Battle of Britain, destroyed two sections of the city and machine-gunned noon-day crowds in the streets.

Boy Meets—and Marries—Girl in Africa

A human interest story that sounds like something out of a fiction magazine was revealed with the announcement of the wedding "Somewhere in Africa" of Lieut. Alonzo E. Weaver, U.S. Army Air Corps and Lieut. Elizabeth Jane Reynolds, U.S. Army Nurse Corps. Lieut. Weaver, from Jacksonville, Fla., and his bride who comes from Bedford, Iowa, first met at an army camp in the U.S. Army service separated them until the fortunes of war reunited them in Africa. The photo shows Col. Eugene Fleming, African air base commander, congratulating the happy couple.

Canadian Assistance Is Proving Big Help to People of Soviet

That smile you see here illustrates this Russian officer's thanks to the people on this side of the Atlantic for a huge shipment of warm clothing recently arrived on the Russian front. The gloves he is trying on will help him all the more to keep Germans on the run.

Contributions to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund will send more surgical weapons like these forceps being sterilized by a Russian nurse in the front lines.

face looking out across the water toward the garden. "I was born at San Luis Obispo, in California, on a big ranch there, and my mother died before I knew her. At least—I know that it is a strange thing to say—at least that's what they told me. Isn't it curious that you have to depend upon somebody's account of it in a terribly important thing like that? Anyway, the first thing I can remember were about the ranch, and a grand old thing of a horse, having that when I was 10, just before Christmas, a lawyer and some other people came and said I must go off to school, in a convent in the foothills of the High Sierras. So they what did I cry my eyes out, poor me—"

She laughed, but did not quite gaily. "I wasn't bad, though, when I got used to it. Then, when I was about 15, the Mother Superior called me to the reception room, and there, of all the people in the world, was Colonel Merriweather. And so I naturally started calling him Colonel Merriweather, and then just Colonel. "Did he take you away then?" Vaughan Dunbar asked. His voice was quiet indeed. "We went to San Francisco and then to Hawaii, and back to San Francisco, and then you ever heard of in your life. And then we went to New Orleans and New York, and then we moved out here and it has all been like Cinderella! Yes. But—will you forgive me, Cynthia—it is a little bit of a story."

"Great heavens! You haven't got the life in it yet!" "Impossible!" He chuckled softly, and touched her hand for a moment. "But tell me, where was the Colonel all those years? Say, now! That's not the least bit of my business, is it?" "None whatever," she laughed. "But I began the story, didn't I? The thrilling story of a maiden's life, in five reels and no intermission."

"The truth is, Mr. Vaughan Dunbar, that I was never very curious enough to ask the Colonel and he never bothered to tell me. Oh, yes, he did too. He said he had been traveling with a great deal of important work to do, and he was sorry that his affairs had made him forget to tell me. I was a bit disappointed. None of that mattered to me, of course. I was started off in a new world, and I could have everything I wanted. A spoiled brat—that's what I was, and what I am now. Mr. Dunbar, your're looking smart into the face of a spoiled brat. Deplorable, isn't it?" "The fact is I should use quite another word than deplorable."

"You do go on, don't you?" Cynthia said, very quietly. "I never heard anything of her, by the time I was old enough to ask the nurse questions. The nurse was gone. Nobody else seemed to know anything. "You never made inquiries of the Colonel?" "She shook her head. And then her tone changed sharply. "Why in the world am I telling you all that? That's what I would like to know. Oh, I see! She was almost bitter for an instant. "The great journalist! That's what gets you the secrets of the great statesmen isn't it? That ability to make people fold up their souls and hand them over to you, should have remembered."

Below Poverty Line Problems of Production And Distribution Heard By Pensioners Society

Two problems, the solved one of production, and the unsolved one of distribution, were dealt with by A. J. Hooke, M.L.A. for Rocky Mountain House, speaking before the regular monthly meeting of the Alberta Pensioners Society in the L.O.O.F. Hall, 103 street, Monday night.

In Air Force

All producers of raw materials, said Mr. Hooke, do their utmost to keep production at the highest possible level, ensuring supply for themselves. Through many genius, machines were invented that produce more and more goods; but hand in hand with this production is the problem of distribution. We cannot have the goods thus produced.

"At your day and mine," declared the speaker, "to see that these goods are made available during the depression years, he continued. 90 per cent of the world's population live below the poverty line. China alone, for example, in 1934 had 22 million people suffering from malnutrition. At the same time, agricultural production in the country was restricted, and some 13,000,000 bushels of wheat were being sold for less than the cost of production.

WASTED PRODUCTION
Citing further examples of inefficient production, Mr. Hooke pointed out that in 1934, 15,000,000 acres of cotton produced in the United States were sold for less than the cost of production. At the same time, the 13,000,000 bushels of wheat were being sold for less than the cost of production. "At the start of the war, we were unprepared, and now we have built up a surplus of goods that will overflow the powers bent on production," he declared. "We have shown the world that democracy can succeed. It's worth dying for, as men are dying for it today, then it's worth living for."

Mr. Hooke, chairman of the Social Credit Board, and R. E. Ansley, M.L.A. for Lethbridge, declared that the speaker, who is chairman of the board, spoke in place of A. W. Buchanan, who was forced to cancel his scheduled lecture due to illness.

Mr. Ansley outlined differences between the totalitarianism of the present and the democracy of the past. The struggle now being waged is not a struggle for power, but a struggle for the right to live. It is not a struggle for power, but a struggle for the right to live. It is not a struggle for power, but a struggle for the right to live.

The charges arose out of an accident on the Edmonton-Calgary highway Oct. 29 last in which Henry Wullenberg, 35-year-old clerk, died, rendering Mrs. Wullenberg a paraplegic.

Members of the jury were Leonard E. Edmondson, W. G. Heathcote, Edmondson, T. G. McKenney, Frank Walker, E. E. Harlow, and J. W. McLaughlin, K.C., return prosecutor for the Edmonton judicial district, presiding. R. Fred Jackson was defense counsel.

This is the second of a series of articles introducing my 1942 All-American Team. I have selected six members to the All-American Team for 1942. Aside from the selection of Captain, Mrs. A. M. Subel of New York, the other members are presented in the order in which they finished in Master Point Rating.

Charles H. Gove of Philadelphia was second the year, winning 20 Master Points in 1942. Gove has been a member of several of the All-American Teams.

His achievement in 1942 included winning the world's best bridge Masters play title, the national bridge team championship, and the Eastern States mixed team. He was the team of four at the 1942 World Championship in Philadelphia.

Another achievement of Gove's in 1942 was the writing of a book on the play of the hand, "Bridge for Better Players," one of the few books of this type designed for the expert. He gives as an example of the play of the hand that appears in his book.

From the first trick, Gove's East embarked on a campaign of deception. He played the ten of hearts, then continued to lead the queen when he was allowed to win the first trick. Declarer started the diamonds and Gove was in with the ace. On a third round declarer's queen, Gove reached the free-spot, playing the king. Declarer then forced out the diamond king. Gove did not care how long heart but patiently waited with his third diamond. He then dealt the hand the desired effect, the hand developed into a doublet from a normal hand. As it seemed almost that West held the last heart, but Gove's queen was after making his queen of spades.

Marian Anderson Scores Triumph Before Enthusiastic Audience

Marian Anderson gave a convincing demonstration of the art which has made her an international musical celebrity when she appeared in recital at the Empire Theatre Monday night. Her appearance marked the fifth and final event in the Celebrity Series of Concerts given by the Women's Musical Guild. As a triumph, the concert was a triumph for the Guild, which has been a reception that must rank high even among those that have been her portion through the years.

The occasion also marked the passing of the Empire as an entertainment center for the duration of the war. Canadian and American Pay To Be Studied

Differences in wages paid American and Canadian workers employed on similar work on the Alaska highway will be studied by the executive of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council, and a brief will be sent to the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada so that representations can be made to the Dominion government seeking equal pay for Canadian workers.

Membership of the Edmonton Trades body, following a report by A. Sidney Pearson, president of the council, on wage rates paid American and Canadian workers on the highway, the council has decided to make the survey, and take the necessary steps to obtain the discontinuance of the discrimination against Canadian workers.

INCREASING DISCONTENT
Dissatisfaction and discontent was increasing amongst Canadian workers on this project against the discrimination against them in wage rates. They can be no reason why they should be asked to do similar work to Americans at considerably less wages.

He said that the working conditions on the highway were excellent, and the food served the workers could not be bettered in any class city restaurant.

"The only kick the Canadian workers have is the discrimination in the matter of wages, and the sooner this is ironed out the better it will be for all concerned," he stated. "As he asked the council to give the matter consideration."

The delegation of the carpenters union asked that the executive enquire into the violation by an American contractor of the hours of work agreement on certain projects being carried out in the area.

54 HOURS WEEKLY
It was claimed that although the carpenters' union agreement called for a 44-hour week, time-and-a-half for overtime above the 44 hours, the double time on Sunday and certain holidays, the 54-hour week standard was being used by the contractor.

The violation was a violation of the agreement. The carpenters' union, however, and their union, the contractors were not deliberately evading the union agreement, and considered it possible that a delegation from the union could be formed from the Trades and Labor Council presented their case.

HIGH AS 80 HOURS
There was complaint also that carpenters were being worked as high as 80 hours week when the agreement provided for 44 hours maximum. The executive was instructed to enquire into the matter, and a committee was formed to enquire into the matter, and a committee was formed to enquire into the matter.
